

METHOD AND SYSTEM FOR MONITORING DOMAIN NAME REGISTRATIONS

5

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Improved approaches to domain name monitoring are disclosed. The monitoring of domain names, e.g., registrations therefor, is beneficial to holders of similar domain names, trademark owners, and competitors. Such monitoring can be automatically performed.

10

For the purpose of the present disclosure, the term "domain name" refers to a name that identifies a particular computer system or network of computer systems, such as a website, and is typically used to access the computer system or network of computer systems. The term "domain name registration" refers to the process of registering a domain name with a domain name registrar, which is a company that manages the domain name registration process. The term "domain name holder" refers to the person or entity that owns the domain name. The term "domain name owner" refers to the person or entity that has the right to use the domain name. The term "domain name registrant" refers to the person or entity that is responsible for the domain name registration process. The term "domain name registrant" refers to the person or entity that is responsible for the domain name registration process. The term "domain name registrant" refers to the person or entity that is responsible for the domain name registration process.